Immigration Head Retained

25X1A

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House was expected to announce today the reappointment of World War II hero Joseph M. Swing as chief of the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The retired Army general confirmed reports today that he had been asked to stay on in his present job. He consulted with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy on Tuesday.

Swing, close friend of former President Eisenhower, has been head of the immigration service since 1954.

The 64-year-old West Point classmate of the former president led numerous Pacific campaigns during World War II and retired as a lieutenant general a few months before becoming immigration chief.

He abolished the old detention centers for immigrants at Ellis Island and San Pedro, Calif.

He conducted a campaign to deport subversives and racketeers and is credited with reducing drastically the number of "wetbacks"—Mexican workers—who illegally enter the United States.

Swing is the third top-level official the new attorney general has asked to stay on in the Justice Department. The others are FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover and Federal Prisons System Director James V. Bennett.

Kennedy also asked Central Intelligence Director W. Allen Dulles to stay.

A number of other positions still must be filled by the Justice Department, including assistant attorney general in charge of the civil rights trust, and criminal
